A sensor is made known in DE 197 38 316 A1 and US 5 532 585 A that comprises a permanent magnet located symmetrically across from a Hall element in the initial position. The permanent magnet produces two magnet fluxes extending inversely, each of which moves over rigidly located flux concentrating pieces. The guide part of the permanent magnet does not affect the direction of the magnetic flux; it merely serves to guide and transmit the motion to be measured.
